It is with deep amazement and pain that we learned of the sudden death of Professor Umberto SOLIMENE, President of FEMTEC.

We had recently exchanged by phone, and he was then full of projects and seemed in great shape. For me personally, 30 years of esteem, friendship and affection come to an end.

But, beyond his strong and warm presence that will be missed by all, we will keep the image of an exceptional man, of great intelligence, perceiving the evolution of things well before the others, right, hardworking, never tired, never discouraged, always good-tempered, seeking consensus and soothing differences and divisions, fully dedicated to the health and well-being of people, it that is to say to “others”.

He was fully a doctor with a wide medical knowledge. His achievements as head of FEMTEC and, more generally, his investment in complementary medicine for the benefit of patients with chronic diseases are, in many respects, exceptional and cannot be forgotten by future generations.

No one can replace him, and it will be difficult to succeed him.

The ISMH offers to the family of Professor Umberto SOLIMENE as well as to FEMTEC its sincere condolences and expresses very sincere wishes so that the achievements he has carried out can continue and develop.
